TRAFFIC IN SOUTH AMERICA

How Congestion and Accidents Are Avoided in the Streets of Buenos Aires.

Buenos Aires is very much unlike our American cities. In the first place, there are no sky scrapers. The highest building does not exceed seven or eight stories. Then there are miles upon miles of streets with buildings of one story predominating. It is laid out in rectangular blocks, average about 400 feet on each side. The streets are narrow, and even in the residence section they are generally built clear up to the street line. The principal business streets, such as Florida, Cuyo, Cangallo, Bartolome itre, San Martin, 25th of May, etc., e only 33 feet wide, and you will nder how the traffic is managed, ys Travel. It is done in this wise: Street cars and vehicles are allowed to move only one way. On the adjoining street they move in the opposite direction. It is surprising how this plan helps to solve a serious problem of congestion. Cabs and automobiles dash along with seeming disregard of human life, yet few accidents result. A uniformed policeman is stationed at each street intersection where traffic is congested and assists in the protection of foot passengers and drivers. This police force, made up of men with Indian blood in their veins, impresses the visitor as most efficient.

EVIDENTLY A HARD TASK

Somewhat Humorously Worded Epistle the Result of Struggle With English Language.

As the most delightful example she has ever seen of the English the European uses in his correspondence, a woman who has just returned from "the other side" is showing her friends a letter that she declares to be her most interesting "souvenir."

"After we left Amsterdam," she explains, "my daughter discovered that she had left her cuff-links in our room at the pension. So I wrote back to the proprietress, whom I knew spoke English, asking her to look for them. Here is the reply."

Then she shows it. And this, word for word, is how it reads:

"Dear Mrs. Thomas Grant:

"Immediately upon receiving your lettre I am going at once to looking in every drawer, and found this two button in the table near her bed. Can it be this two things what your daughter lost?

"In that way I am very glad to found it.

"So not, be so good to send it me back, for it might be of another person who perhaps will write me he lost something."

Furnishing Change.

"Five dollars in change to be sent around to her house within five minutes, that was all the woman living at No. 211 in the next street wanted," said the New York grocer. "Not even a cake of soap to go with it as a guarantee of good faith—just the $5. I thought I had got so used to cheeky requests that nothing could surprise me in that line, but the change proposition did give me something of a jolt. A cheap peddler had called with something she wanted to buy; she was afraid to trust him with the money to go out and get the change; she couldn't leave the house herself, and she had nobody to send, so she just telephoned around so she could get 75 cents in change. Yes, we sent it because she buys things here once in a while, but I hope other women in the neighborhood won't get the habit."

Ears of Animals.

The hearing apparatus of animals is like that of human beings, but modified to suit the conditions of the animal's life. Deer, hares, and horses like all animals whose life necessitates keen hearing, have ears shaped and set in the best way to catch faint far-off sounds. The serpent has no ear-drums. The ear of the fish is a membraneous labyrinth connected with the bladder by a series of little bones.

Though the sense of hearing is perfect only in the higher animals, even the animals that have no ears perceive sounds. Instead of ears they are supplied with fine nerves whose function is to note and to respond to every touch; nerves whose receiving centers are different from the centers of tly tactile impressions. All cluding insects, have an hich enables them to dis- pproach of an enemy.—

staff of life" was by no means the first item on men's bill of fare For we know not how many ages human beings lived entirely without bread or anything approaching it in character. The first men were hunters and lived mostly on the flesh of e creatures they killed in the chase he pastoral stage, which followed e hunter period, supplied milk along with the flesh of the domestic animals, and bread was practically unknown until men had settled down to agriculture. The Chinese emperor Ching Noung is said to have been the first to teach men the art of husbandry and the method of making bread from wheat about 4,000 years before Christ.

Hoping for the Best.

"Now that we are married," said e pretty chorus girl, "what do you propose to do?"

"Why," replied the son of the millionaire, "I think we had better keep it a secret until I can get a good chance to break the news to the governor when he is in a pleasant mood."

"But how long is it likely to be before he gets into that kind of a

FOR AFTERNOON TEA SERVICE

Dainty Articles That Are Appropriate—Acceptable Wedding Gift for Summer Bride.

One of the newer forms for afternoon tea service is a squat cream jug and sugar bowl of rock crystal set in a silver frame with arched handle to make passing easy.

Another useful article is a cake lifter of silver. This is on the order of ice tongs, but the one prong is flat instead of forked.

A convenient tea strainer has a silver bowl and handle, and rests on a rock crystal, silver-rimmed dish to prevent dripping on the cloth.

For tea on the lawn the wicker tables on wheels are light and convenient. They are provided with double trays and can be filled and pushed to any part of the grounds.

Tea trays for porch service are of dark green wicker rims with base of cretonne or rare old brocade covered with glass. The handles on each end are substantial enough for hard use.

Long-handled iced teaspoons make an acceptable wedding gift for the summer bride, as they will be in constant use for lunch and afternoon tea. Those with hollowed tubes through which the tea can be sipped like a straw are more novel than practical, as they are open to suspicion from a sanitary standpoint.

FOR SUCCESS WITH POTATOES

Happy-Go-Lucky Cooking Will Not Do —Care In Preparation Is Well Repaid.

Soak old potatoes in water.

Change the water while cooking, if strong.

Never allow potatoes to stand in the sun.

Always pour off the water as soon as done and remove the cover to allow the steam to escape.

Potatoes cooked in their jackets should be pierced to allow the steam to escape.

Baked potatoes should be rolled in a cloth till skins burst. This prevents the potatoes from cooking too long, which makes them sticky and soggy.

Potatoes should be simmered (not boiled). It is a waste of fuel and spoils the potatoes. Too rapid boiling makes them a solid paste which is both unpalatable and indigestible.

Cook potatoes with the skins on as often as possible. Potatoes are delicious cooked in their jackets, peeled and mashed.

Potatoes may be kept warm a long time without spoiling, if the skins are broken and the kettle well ventilated.

Kitchen Dresser.

If your kitchen table is spotted with grease, or if the dresser has dabs and spots of grease on it, you can clean the woodwork perfectly by scrubbing it vigorously with hot water to which a teaspoonful of whiting has been added.

Wipe thoroughly dry with a clean cloth and the wood will be as good as new.

When tables or dressers are covered with white oilcloth provide yourself with thick mats of cardboard or asbestos on which to set hot plates, for heat will surely ruin any oilcloth with which it comes directly in contact.

New Linen Closet.

In planning for a new linen closet, remember that if the shelf that is to be waist high is made much wider than the others, it will be a great help when sorting articles, serving as a table. It will also pay to keep in the closet a thin board for use when removing articles from points near the bottom of the pile, says the Ladies' Home Journal. Just slip the board in where you need to get something, and use it as a lever with which to raise the things that are above it.

Mushroom Hint.

While peeling mushrooms I noticed tiny punctures like pin pricks in the white flesh. Examination with a microscope revealed the presence of small worms deep in the flesh, which were invisible to the naked eye. These punctures are not noticeable on the outside of the mushroom, but lie just beneath the peeling, and when present this warning should never be disregarded; for wormy mushrooms, besides being unpleasant to contemplate, are poisonous.

For Children's Party.

A novel thing for a children's lunch at a party is made from a box of animal crackers, a box of saltines, and a cup of maple syrup. Boil the syrup until it forms a soft ball in water, and drop a little in the center of each saltine. Then put on each saltine an animal cracker, pressing it into the syrup in standing posture. The children love these and they are also better for them than cakes.

Tart Filling.

Lemon or orange paste for tarts: Juice of one lemon or orange and pulp, one egg, one cupful of sugar, one tablespoonful of melted butter. Set it in boiling water to thicken. Put on the tart crusts. If they are deep enough this can be frosted.

Potatoes Baked With Beef.

Parboil ten minutes, then drain, and put in pan around edge of beef. Bake till tender, basting often. Arrange to have the meat done at the same time the potatoes are. Of course they are to be peeled before cooking.

For the Morning Appetite.

Fry two eggs, sunny side up; melt three tablespoonfuls of butter; add one teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce; pour it over the eggs and then go to it.

Peach Salad.

Halve and stone large, fresh peaches, fill the cavities with a mixture of broken walnuts, pieces of pear, and a little celery or minced parsley; chill. When serving garnish with parsley and serve with whipped cream

Compote of Fruit.

For dessert fill a compote with seaable fruit of the choicest quality, s, red-cheeked pears, golden baand chilled purple and red

HER FIRE LADDIE

By LOUISE MERRIFELD

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

The shouting at the window awakened Sibyl. She sat up in bed, pushing back her heavy loosened hair dazedly.

"Well?" she called.

A figure sprang over the sill, and stood sharply silhouetted against the dull orange glow outside.

"I thought somebody was in here," she heard a man's voice say. "The hotel is on fire. Hurry."

"But—wait a moment. What do you want me to do?"

There came a great crash somewhere in the rear of the hotel, and a roar of beating flames. He waited no longer, but went straight to the bed, wrapped her in blankets, and lifted her bodily.

"I can walk," protested Sibyl, clinging nevertheless to his shoulders.

"Be still," he ordered shortly. "We're the last out."

As he lifted her to the sill, and swung out himself, then started down the ladder, a sudden giddiness swept over her. He stopped once, breathing heavily.

There were shouts below them of encouragement. She heard them say the life net was spread.

"Your hair blows across my eyes," he gasped. "Take it away."

She managed to sweep it back, and as she did so, there for an instant as they stood balanced on the brink of death, she saw his face for the first time in the light of the flames. His helmet was pulled low over his face, but she saw the strong, clean lines of the jaw, the close, resolute mouth and aggressive chin, above all, his eyes, keen and alert between half-closed lids as he looked at her.

Above them there came a second thundering crash as the two upper floors fell in. The outer wall, where the ladder rested, swayed and a cry of horror went up from below. He smiled grimly at her, tightening his hold.

"Better trust to the net, hadn't we?"

"No," she said. "Don't drop me, please. I'm not afraid."

He began the descent once more, past windows where tongues of fire leaped out, and threatened her floating hair and light gown, and the crowd held its breath watching the two.

"Don't lean away. It makes it harder," he managed to get out. Obediently she held closely to him, her face almost pressed to his, and curiously enough, she had no fear of death in that moment, only a vague wonderment that after a whole season in Washington's diplomatic whirl, she—Sibyl Traverse—should wander down here to Palm Grove, Fla., and feel her first thrill of love at the voice and touch of a perfect stranger.

"He Began the Descent."

She remembered smiling at the absurdity of it, and then all the world seemed to turn into smoke and reaching flames.

The first words she spoke an hour later, as she lay in a guest room up at Airlie cottage, were in harmony with the rest of the night's adventures.

"What is his name?"

"Whose name, Sibyl darling?" asked her friend, Rose Airlie, anxiously. "Are you hurt much, dear? It didn't burn your hair a particle."

"Was the fireman hurt—the one that saved me?"

"Not very badly. Burned around the arms and wrists, that was all. I've wired your father and mother, and everybody not to worry, that you are all right, and not to think of going north until you are quite strong after this shock. Anyway, I told you that you simply would have to stay until the floral ball, and now you must, you see. It's fate."

Sibyl said nothing. She was thinking of a pair of gray eyes, and lips that laughed at peril.

The floral ball was nearly three weeks later. Her chaperon, Aunt Stella, had gone back to Washington, but Mrs. Airlie took her place, and there was an amused gleam in her eyes that escaped Sibyl's attention. She was still a trifle pale, and her eyes seemed sad and troubled. She wore a quaint empire gown of primrose satin.

"You look like a miniature painting of Walewski," laughed Rose. "Wasn't that the name of the adorable Pole Napoleon loved? I only wish I had a suitable mate for you, Sib, dear. Roy Buell was my choice, but the old general has hurried him back to Atlanta."

Sibyl only smiled wistfully and picked up her gloves.

"I'm not a bit interested, Rose, in any of the masculine persuasion."

"No?" Rose dimpled mischievously. "Perhaps you may change."

Not half an hour later, as Sibyl stood on the great stone terrace that led off the ballroom with an Annapolis boy, Rose came up with a stranger. As in a dream Sibyl caught the murmured name, "Roy Buell." But she was looking again into the eyes of her fire hero, hearing again his deep, sure voice.

"But I don't understand one bit," she exclaimed, as he took the cadet's place. "I feel—oh, just embarrassed and confused, you know."

"Don't I know?" he laughed. "For three weeks I have been fighting with myself to try to keep away from you, and here I am."

"But you're not a fireman?"

"Oh, but I am. We have no protection here at the beach at all, so last summer a crowd of us formed ourselves into a volunteer fire company. Rather fortunate, wasn't it, when the hotel burned? I never saw myself actually doing the ladder rescue before that."

"You laugh over it," she said slowly, "but you saved my life."

He bent suddenly over her hand as it lay beside him on the broad arm of the bamboo chair, and kissed it. Mrs. Airlie was approaching with a fresh train of admirers.

"I have come back to claim it," he said, with meaning. "May I, dear?"

She had barely time to answer, but as she rose to go the faint, delicious perfume of the jasmines in her hair swept over him.

"You know what the children say?" he added, holding her hand prisoner. "Finding's keepings?"

"You've got it, haven't you?' she faltered. "Oh, please, please don't! They'll see you."

He laughed, as he held her close to him.

"Hundreds saw me hold you like this the other night," he told her. "And you did not care. I wish your hairs were loose and blowing across my lips again. Sibyl—say you do care."

"Care?" she laughed softly. "If you had been only the fire laddie I thought you, Roy, I would have eloped with you tomorrow."

Is England Declining?

Shades of Tom Cribb and Jem Mace! Has the prize ring so declined in England that it has no "white hope" to pit against the world, regardless of color? Pugilism has for centuries found its congenial home in England. It long enjoyed royal patronage, and its "Chickens" and "Slashers" are a part of literature. Peers did not disdain to put on the gloves with professional bruisers, and the name of one lives in popular fame for the rules that still govern prize ring bouts.

Time was when the protests of bishops and archbishops would not have availed to prevent a fight in which the whole populace was interested. That they are effectual now is due to their reflection of a popular distrust in the white man's supremacy with his fists—a suggestive commentary on the lost glories of British pugilism.—New York World.

Keeper of Seals.

The London Gazette last night contained the formal notification that his majesty had ordered A. Conge d'Elire to pass the great seal of the united kingdom empowering the dean and chapter of Christ-church, Oxford university, to elect a bishop to the see of Oxford, says the Dundee Advertiser.

As Mr. d'Elire jocularly remarked to London Punch' correspondent, judging from the number of seals he has to pass he might just as well be a keeper at the zoo.

NO EXCUSE FOR FORGETTING

West Virginian Invents Machine Which He Says Will Jog Memory for Twenty Years.

An automatic memorandum register or cabinet has been invented by a West Virginia judge. He claims that it can be depended on to provide means by which all business to be transacted during any particular day, hour or minute in the future will not be forgotten; to enable the office force to concentrate its efforts on one thing at a time without the fear of forgetting something which cannot be attended to until later on, thus keeping the mind care free and enabling one to transact business more rapidly and accurately than could be done if burdened or overtaxed with several matters that could be better intrusted to this cabinet.

A person may have a business transaction to be attended to at intervals of any time within the year or next twenty years and dismiss it from the mind only upon the cabinet and get the notice promptly at that time, even if sound asleep at a distance of 100 feet. It is so constructed, says the Manufacturers' Record, that the business of the night or day forces will not conflict. It tells what to do, when to do it, what file to find certain papers in, the initial they are filed under and who filed them.

It is so arranged that all business closed yesterday or anything requiring attention tomorrow is entirely separated from today. It is an accurate timepiece and provides an automatic calendar which gives complete dates for fifteen years and provides an additional ready reference roller calendar by which you can almost instantly select any date from the year 1800 to 2000. It also gives "silent notice."

Should the rewinding be forgotten the little hinged door at the top of the cabinet trips automatically every thirty days at 2 p. m., sound the alarm, covers the dates and spells out "wind me up." It is ten inches thick, four feet high and two feet wide and can be hung on the wall or rested on a file case or any other convenient place.

CREAM OF MIXED VEGETABLES

Combination In Soup Has Distinct Advantage Over That Made From One Material.

A delicious soup is made from a combination of vegetables. Have ready two heaping tablespoonfuls each diced onion, carrot and celery and one tablespoonful of turnip. Put three tablespoonfuls of butter or olive oil into a saucepan and when hot add the vegetables. Cook ten or fifteen minutes, taking care not to let them brown. Put into the double boiler three pints of milk adding a bay leaf, a sprig of parsley and a small blade of mace. When the vegetables are ready add two tablespoonfuls of flour, mixing in well with the fat in the pan, then stir in the vegetables and flour with the hot milk, season with salt, pepper and simmer gently for half an hour. Beat up the yolks of two eggs, stir in with a half cupful of cream, add to the soup, cook a moment and serve, straining or not as perferred. Serve with croutons.

ENAMEL PAINT IN BATHROOM

Applied in Quantities the Result Is a Hygienic and Goodlooking Apartment.

An old bathroom may be almost made over with unlimited white enamel paint. The woodwork, floors and wall may all be painted, even the inside of an old tub.

Before painting the tub, it is necessary to be absolutely sure that the tin is entirely free from grease; otherwise the enamel will soon crack off; in fact, two or three coats should be given it as a foundation for the enamel.

Entirely apart from the plumber's bill, a complete outfit for a bathroom may be bought from $65 to $100, including a porcelain enameled tub Cheaper outfits may be bought, including the painted iron tubs. This estimate includes the small appointments —Harper's Bazar.

The Kitchen Dresser.

If your kitchen table is spotted with grease or if the dresser has dabs and spots of grease on it you can clean the woodwork perfectly by scrubbing it vigorously with hot water to which a teaspoonful of whiting has been added.

Wipe thoroughly dry with a clean cloth and the wood will be as good as new.

When tables or dressers are covered with white oilcloth provide yourself with thick mats of cardboard or asbestos on which to set hot plates, for heat will surely ruin any oilcloth with which it comes directly in contact.

Green Corn Chowder.

Green corn chowder calls for a quarter of a pound of chopped fat ham or salt pork. With it are slowly cooked two chopped onions. When beginning to change color add one quart of scraped or cut raw corn, one pint of diced raw potatoes, salt and pepper and a half pint of boiling water. Simmer slowly for 20 minutes, then add one pint of hot milk and a slight thickening of one tablespoonful each of flour and butter. When taken from the fire add a bowl of broken crackers.

PRACTICAL HINTS for the HOUSEWIFE

See that anything stood away for future use is tightly covered, otherwise it absorbs impurities or may taint eggs, butter and milk.

A delicious sandwich paste is made from shredded lettuce, chopped pimolas and a sprinkling of parmesan cheese. Mix with mayonnaise and spread on buttered slices of brown bread.

Potato Forte.

Two cups white sugar, one cup butter, four eggs, one-half cup milk, one cup cold potatoes, grated, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and cloves, one-half cup chocolate, two cup flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, one cup almonds. Blanche and chop almonds, beat eggs separately, adding whites last. Bake in shallow pans in a moderate oven and cover with frosting.

Nutmeg for Beans.

A foreign chef adds a very tiny pinch of nutmeg to a dish of fresh lima beans. After boiling toss the beans up with a little fine butter and a seasoning of pepper and salt and nutmeg. There should be hardly enough to taste. Any more would be unpleasant and hide the delicate flavor of the beans. The same chef adds the merest pinch of sugar to boiled beets.

Delicious Rye Cake.

Place in mixing dish one egg well beaten, one tablespoonful melted butter, one-half cup molasses, one cup sweet milk. Then add one and one-half cups rye meal, one cup flour, one-half teaspoonful soda, one-half teaspoonful salt, sifted together. Beat well and bake in individual greased tins.

Corned Beef Help.

In cooking corned beef, select the day before you want to use it; cover it with cold water; let it remain until next morning. Boil and serve and you will never cook any other way.

Cheese Crackers.

Spread the little square saltine crackers or any other more convenient with butter, put them in the oven to brown slightly, with a little dry grated cheese sprinkled over them.

Hermits Without Eggs.

One cup maple sugar, some sage cream, one-quarter cup butter, one cup raisins, chopped, one teaspoon soda, salt, flour to mix stiff.

Cream of Tartar Biscuits.

One quart flour, 2 teaspoons cream tartar, 1 of soda dissolved in milk, little butter rubbed in the flour, milk enough to mix. Stir with a knife then knead, roll and cut.

KEEPING SWINE HEALTHY IS OF THE UTMOST IMPORT...

There Is No Theme Upon Farm That Will So Benefit Farmer as to Keep Quarters and Surroundings in Sanitary Condition Where Hogs are Kept—Guard Against Cholera.

A Desirable Hog Cot.

(By GEORGE W. BROWN, Ohio.)

There is no theme upon the farm that will so benefit the farmer as to keep the quarters and surroundings of the farm in a sanitary and healthful condition where swine are kept.

Nowhere will an outbreak of cholera become so disastrous as upon the farm where these animals are kept with dirty, filthy surroundings, and no care taken in the disinfection of the nesting places and slop troughs during the summer time.

Upon our farm we have never practiced the method of keeping a herd of swine in one place very long, and never do we fatten out more than one bunch of animals in the same field in one year, preferring rather to shift our operations about from place to place.

We have no permanent quarters, but rely upon the service of the cot, shown in the illustration.

These bunks can be shifted about easily upon runners, and many times each year are changed from one field to another, or from one pen to another, thus we always have the animals in fresh sleeping quarters, and upon fresh forage. While the animals are located upon a new range, we break up the old range, cropping it in some profitable farm crop, thus getting the benefit of all excrement from the animals, profiting in its enrichment of the soil, and we as well freshening and sweetening the soil by cultivation.

Then swine should be supplied with some shade aside from a board shelter to ward off the heated rays of the summer sun. There is nothing for this purpose quite so nice as clumps of willows, catalpas or poplars grown in some convenient location in each field, preferably along the fence row, in such manner that the animals may have access to the cooling shade during the heat of the day. In one of our fields we have such a clump of quaking-asp and it is pleasing to note how contented these animals are during the sweltering heat of the day, as they lie about in the shade of this rustling clump of trees.

If there is not such shade planted along the borders of a field we should not be slow in planting such if we were in the swine growing business, and every wide awake farmer should be, for indeed he should consider himself too poor to be without this profitable animal upon his premises.

Many make a mistake in allowing their swine to run to the creek during the summer for water. We have such a place upon our farm, and we might save much time in getting water to our swine many times if we allowed them to go to this water course, but we are afraid of it. Indeed in this field we never allow swine to roam, for we do not know what farmer several miles above us in another district might have cholera or plague, and our animals exposed by contamination in the water flowing down stream.

We rather prefer to keep our animals well away from this stream of water, and give them pure water from the well in disinfected troughs, thus doing our part toward keeping down loss from cholera.

We keep down the objectionable and nauseating hog wallow upon our farm and do not tolerate it in the least. We know the swine enjoy it, but we have learned to detest its abominable company, and by changing the animals about, and locating new quarters frequently we keep this mire of mud and filth abandoned. With the advancement along other lines of farm operations, the advancement in this line of work appeals to us as very significant in keeping these animals in a sanitary and healthful location at all times.

USEFUL GUARD FOR A WINDOW

Missouri Man Has Invented Gate That Will be Found Convenient for Variety of Uses.

The door and window guard patented by a Missouri man has a variety of uses. It comprises a gate made of parallel pickets linked together by short cross bars and sliding easily back and forth on rollers. It can be folded up into small compass against one side of the opening it guards or stretched all the way across and made fast. The uses to which such a gate can be put are both numerous and obvious. It can be attached to home or store window to bar thieves and in that case is made of iron and padlocked in its open position, or it can be made of wood and erected at any opening through which a baby could fall, particularly at the head of stairways in the house or on the porch, in place of the gate of solid construction most used for such purpose. The height of the pickets, of course, will vary with the requirements.

Fog Wards Off Frost.

Some California fruit growers now save their crops from frost by creating an artificial fog. An iron wagon carrying a sheet iron tank containing straw sprinkled with water. A fire of tar is lighted in the wagon beneath the tank of water sprinkled straw which generates a large amount of steam, creating a fog which effectually protects the trees.

Hindus on California Farms.

There are nearly 10,000 Hindus scattered along the Pacific coast from California to the Canadian line and many of them are working on farms. They know little about farming but learn readily and as their pay is small farmers find them fairly profitable.

Usefulness of Telephone.

The telephone wire is one of the strongest ties that binds people to the farm. It is the nerve which keeps farm folk in touch with their friends and neighbors and in touch with the outside world.

PROPER PLACE FOR CHICKENS

Should Not be Allowed to Roost On Top of Harness or Buggy—Should Have Good House.

One of the most important things in the care of laying hens is the house that they are to live in. On most farms it used to be that the hen roosted any old place, and her favorite place was on top of the harness or buggy. And when they could not reach their favorite place, they took to the trees, but I can say that the hen's life on the farm has changed, for now you see nice houses and yards for them, says a writer in the Successful Farming.

A good poultry house may be defined as one that is dry, warm and ventilated, and fitted to accommodate the kind of fowls that is to be kept. A stationary house suitable for any kind of fowl may be built of stone or brick, but the best house is built of lumber made in a size suitable for moving once a year at least. Lumber is cheaper than brick or stone, and when you find that there is some improvement that you could make to the advantage of the hen and coop, it will be a good deal cheaper remodeling the wooden building.

It is impossible to build a house that will answer for all times of the year. You will find alterations to make in spring and fall, so when wood is used in its construction it can be built in sections and bolted together. In warm weather you can use wire frames in place of the board sections. Give the hens plenty of room, lots of clean straw to be used as scratching material, fight lice nine days a week, and see if the hens don't pay their way.

The Air-Sacs of Pigeons.

The air-sacs of the pigeon constitute a system of interstices the value of which lies in their absence of weight and resistance.

Flying is possible only to a body of high mechanical efficiency divested of all superfluous material. The original reptiles, which by evolution became birds, were divested of superfluous material, and the body space thus obtained were filled with air-sacs. The body wall, adapting itself to the mechanical requirements, became a hollow cylinder serving as a support for the organs of movement, the mobility of whose parts was assured by the surrounding air-sacs. The air cavities in the bones of other birds are similarly explained.—Harper's Weekly.

Any Oil to Order.

She had been married a week, but she wasn't going to show it. She had spent half the morning scrubbing the newness off her shopping bag and the other half in practicing a supercilious droop of the eyelids before her mirror. And she was quite sure of herself as she sailed into the local department store.

"Yes, madam?" asked the floorwalker in a voice of milk and honey, "and what can I show you?"

"I want—something in oil," she demanded, "suitable for my dining room."

"Quite so, madam; quite so," said the floorwalker, gazing meditatively at her wedding ring. "Would you prefer salad oil, oilcloth, oil paintings, or sardines?"—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

COTTON TREES OF BRAZIL

Pods Contain a Long and Strong Fiber Good for Blankets and Cotton Twine.

There are indigenous to Brazil and growing wild in certain regions two well-known species of trees which are of interest to the commercial world because of their possibilities as producers of cotton fiber. To those who know the cotton-growing industry as it exists in the United States and in other countries, the idea of cotton being produced from trees presents a decided novelty. Not the least remarkable fact about these trees is their occurrence in precisely those regions where it has seemed to be impossible or at least difficult to grow ordinary cotton. No other country in the world possesses so large an area of land which may be utilized for the growing of cotton as does Brazil, and that in other areas it is possible to cultivate trees for the production of cotton fibers must appeal to the textile-producing world as indicating that Brazil must be reckoned with as a future source of large quantities of the world's cotton supply.

One of these trees is called "Barraguda," from its being barrel-shaped, after the peculiar, swelled trunk which is its characteristic. The tree grows twenty-five to thirty-five feet in height, tapering from the great bulge in the trunk to a very slender one, from which branches form about twelve feet above the ground. The trunk is entirely covered with hard and sharp thorns. The pods in which the cotton grows are five to eight inches long and two to four inches in diameter. The fiber is coarse and white and adheres closely to the seeds, which are somewhat smaller than peas. It is a long and a strong fiber, and while too coarse for use in textiles of any degree of fineness, it would lend itself admirably to the fabrication of blankets, cotton twine, and a large variety of other materials.

The habitat of this tree is in central and southern Bahia, and it grows to a lesser extent in the State of Pernambuco.—Consular Reports.

Starves Self Fifty Years.

A strange case of a brother's fifty years' voluntary starvation was brought to light lately by the death, near Lucerne, of a Swiss shepherd, named Dangeli. Dangeli, who was seventy-seven years of age, was found lying on some straw in a barn. He was in the last stages of exhaustion, and was starving. "My papers are correct," Dangeli told the farmer. "You will find that I am wearing three suits of clothes. In each of the suits are pockets in which you will find altogether $6,400 in notes and shares. For fifty years I have worked in France as a shepherd, and I saved almost every penny of my earnings for my sister. I walked from France to Lucerne so that she will benefit by every farthing of my savings." The money was found on Dangeli, and given to his sister. She believed him to have died long ago.

White Snails Are Edible.

The large, whitish snail, found on the downs and chalk lands of Surrey and Sussex, is certainly eatable, though I should hesitate at the ordinary brown or striped hedgerow snail. It has been conjectured that these large white snails are in direct descent from the Roman importation of snails, which may very well be true. But the country folk will not eat them. A "foreign gentleman" was held in great scorn by certain villagers because he collected these snails, gave them a week's special diet and then ate them. Cooked with the right sauce the snail can be delicious. But don't forget the sauce. When you have hooked him out of the shell empty the liquor that remains in the shell into your mouth. It's delicious.—London Chronicle.

Sir Edward Carson, famous British lawyer, was noted for his ready wit. Yet another case of difference between bench and bar."

POETIC MEALS OF PERSIA

Delicacies Prepared for the Traveler Sound Like Banquets Described in Fairy Tales.

Persian delicacies prepared for the delectation of the traveler sound somewhat like the banquets described in fairy tales. It is suspected that the natives dine somewhat more prosaically; but what could be more tempting to the epicure possessed of poetic fancy than the following?

One of the best overtures to a wayside repast in Persia is a watermelon, not cut in slices, as is done by some neophyte, but eaten, like an egg, one end being cut off, and the contents eaten with a wooden spoon, the rosy fluid trickling all the time to the bottom, and affording a fragrant beverage when the first proceeding is completed.

As second course may be recommended a cold fowl, with slices of snake cucumber. For side dishes, the most refreshing are sour milk with chopped sage or rose leaves, also eaten with a pear wood spoon, or cucumber smothered in sour cream. In Faristan ice can be obtained to add to these cooling preparations, which may also be flavored with rose water.

For dessert, the most easily procured dainties are prepared cream or kaimak, flaked with sugar, fresh almonds, iced rose water sweetened with honey or rendered more fragrant with the aroma of mountain thyme and absinthe.

Many little additions, to complete the poetic phase of the repast, may be occasionally obtained, as a bunch of delicious grapes, suspended for an hour under the moistened frond of a date tree, figs served up in cream, dates lightly fried in olive oil, or apricot paste dissolved in fresh milk.—Harper's Weekly.

French Youth to Learn Chess.

A quaint petition has just been presented to the French Minister of Public Instruction. At the famous cafe de la Regence there meet daily and nightly groups of chess players who have formed themselves into an association known as the Chess Federation of the Cafe de la Regence. Here the most important class championships in Paris are decided. The committee of the association have just approached the minister with the request that a series of chess manuals, which they themselves have selected, shall be distributed with other books as prizes at the end of the school term to the pupils of the various lycees. The chess players are anxious that a knowledge of their favorite game should penetrate among the younger generation, conscious as they are of the importance of chess in building up character and forming the mind. The minister has granted the request, and France may expect to see grow up among them a generation of chess devotees, just as it is now nurturing a generation of football players.—Paris Correspondent London Globe.

What a splendid opportunity to provide this vast army of healthy youngsters with a wholesome and appetizing cracker lunch, done up in a neat package and still cheap enough to be within the reach of even the poorer parents.

We once saw one of these cracker lunches as got up by a large biscuit concern in Germany. The paper box contained six delicious crackers with a marmalade filling, and there was an empty compartment for a nice red apple or a couple of plums, which of course were added by the mother of the child. These school lunches, exclusive of the fruit, were sold at 5 pfennings, or about 1¼ cents.—Baker's Weekly.

SOME FAMOUS BEST SELLERS

Often, Like "Innocents Abroad," They Have Been the First Books of the Authors.

Many best sellers have been the first books of their authors. Mark Twain, then an impecunious newspaper man with little more than a local reputation for journalistic practical jokes, persuaded the publishers of a western paper to pay his expenses on the widely exploited excursion of the Quaker City. The letters which were the result of this journey grew into the book "The Innocents Abroad" and the name of Mark Twain became an American household word.

Archibald Clavering Gunter, who had been a mining and civil engineer and a broker on the San Francisco exchange, possessed a manuscript that no established publisher could be induced to touch. So he issued it at his own expense and in a very short time the question of the hour became "Have you read 'Mr. Barnes of New York?'"

The pastor of a church in a small town on the Hudson river visited Chicago just after the great fire, saw in the catastrophe the background of a novel with a strong religious appeal, and in the course of a few months awoke to find himself famous as the author of "Barriers Burned Away."

An impetuous southern woman, the author of one or two books that had been lost in the turmoil of the great civil struggle, went to New York at the close of the war with the manuscript of a novel and a year or two later the traveler in southern states was progressing on land by St. Elmo coaches, on water by St. Elmo steamboats, staying in St. Elmo hotels, smoking St. Elmo cigars and drinking St. Elmo punch.

It was a very different matter with Frances Hodgson Burnett's "Little Lord Fauntleroy," says the Bookman. That book was the work, not of a novice, but of a writer who knew her metier, who had years before won a reputation for imagination and good workmanship and who had already produced eight books of conceded quality.

He—No; you're right, dear. They'd probably ask only 98 cents.—Yonkers Statesman.

Not an experiment, but a proved fact Hamlins Wizard Oil has cured numberless cases of painful ills for which we recommend it. We have testimonials as proof.

The production of Portland cement in the United States made a new high record last year, the government estimate placing the figures between 73,500,000 and 75,000,000 barrels, as compared with 63,508,471 barrels in 1909.

A merchant advertises because he wants your trade. He will make it worth your while to patronize him.

Value of Waste Paper.

It is an interesting fact that waste paper can be so important a commercial factor. In Toronto, Canada, there are 10,000 tons of waste paper collected annually. For these there is received about $100,000. For just the ordinary waste paper the sum of $1 a ton is paid. But for the better grade of waste papers the price has been known to run as high as $40 a ton.

Good Advice for Preacher.

Among the stories related by the late Rev. Dr. A. F. Pierson was one of a marble-cutter, with chisel and hammer, working a block of stone into a statue. A preacher who was looking on said: "I wish I could, on hearts of stone, deal such transforming blows!" "Perhaps you might," was the workman's quiet answer, "if, like me, you worked on your knees."

To Remove Tar.

To remove tar from clothes rub butter or lard over the tar spots, then wash with soap and water. Apply oil of turpentine and let remain for one hour, then wash again and the tar will be removed. To remove tar from the hands rub with outside of fresh orange or lemon peel and wipe dry immediately.

Probably Holds Record.

Mr. Elias Taylor, parish clerk of Felsted, England, has retired on reaching the age of ninety, after fifty-one years of service. During his term of office he daily ascended the church tower to wind the clock. He discharged that duty 18,500 times, and climbed 100 miles of stairs.

A Drop of Blood

Or a little water from the human system when thoroughly tested by the chief chemist at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., tells the story of impoverished blood—nervous exhaustion or some kidney trouble. Such examinations are made without cost and is only a small part of the work of the staff of physicians and surgeons under the direction of Dr. R. V. Pierce giving the best medical advice possible without cost to those who wish to write and make a full statement of symptoms. An imitation of natures method of restoring waste of tissue and impoverishment of the blood and nervous force is used when you take an alterative and glyceric extract of roots, without the use of alcohol, such as

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

Which makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgment. Get what you ask for!

This Congregation Was Punished.

The "Bluecoat Boys" of an older time had worse things to complain of then hard discipline and poor food. Since the day when "Christes hospitall erected was, a passing dede of pittie," they have had their grievances. And they were fated to hear probably the longest sermon ever preached from any pulpit. It was in 1671, and the preacher was Isaac Barrow. He subsequently published the sermon, and it runs to 230 pages. Its subject was "The Duty and Reward of Bounty to the Poor," and Tillotson has said of it that "it seems to have exhausted the whole argument and left no consideration belonging to it untouch'd." No one will be likely to quarrel with that statement. But there would have been some excuse for a school boys' strike in those days.—London Chronicle.

Paper and Ink for Our Money.

The materials that go to make up our paper money are gathered together from all parts of the world. Part of the paper fiber is linen rag from the Orient. The silk comes from China or Italy. The blue ink is made from German or Canadian cobalt. The black ink is made from Niagara falls acetylene gas smoke, and most of the green ink is green color mixed in white zinc sulphite made in Germany. The red color in the seal is obtained from a pigment imported from Central America.—Scientific American.

Hog That Climbed a Ladder.

When Charles Prausa of Kadlee, Wis., heard a racket in his apple orchard during the night he started out with his gun to investigate, says the Milwaukee Sentinel. He saw something pulling apples from a tree and supposed it was a person. He demanded a surrender, but no answer came. Then he threatened to shoot. In due time he pulled the trigger and upon closer investigation discovered that he had shot one of his own hogs. The hog had climbed up on a stepladder and was helping himself to the apples.

One for Each Face.

A western politician had quite a reputation in his own town for successful duplicity. It was generally believed that his idea of party principles was to work and vote with the winning side. He once entered the store of a druggist who happened, at the time, to be opposed to him politically.

"I want a jar of face cream," he said.

"Be sanitary, Tom," replied the druggist. "Get two jars."—From Success

The Thistle Travels Far.

Careful examination has been made of the heads of Canada thistledowns in order to determine their effectiveness as parachutes carrying the seeds of the plant to great distances through the air. The results of this examination are quite remarkable.

Calculation shows that a thistledown starting from an elevation of 20 feet in still air would require two-thirds of a minute to reach the ground. With a wind blowing 20 miles an hour it would be carried on the average about a fifth of a mile. The total surface exposed to the air in an average thistledown is, on account of the great number of hairlets, a little more than one-third of a square foot.

Another well know and very beautiful example of nature's parachutes is furnished by the light silken threads with the aid of which the little gossamer spider makes long aerial voyages.—Scientific American.

"The day is not far distant," said Dr. W. E. Taylor at the dry farming congress, "when all of our Western lands where ten or more inches of rain falls annually, will produce food in abundance for man and beast. The principles of dry farming are applicable to any section of the United States and when all farmers adopt the same thorough tillage the dry-land farmers are obliged to, the increase in production will be far greater than the increase in population."

Campbell Improvement Club Holds Meeting

The Improvement Club met Monday night at the Library building, President J. F. Wilson in the chair. In the absence of Secretary Dick, W. Shelly acted pro tem. The president tendered his resignation, which was accepted, and W. S. Shelly was made chairman of the Banquet Committee.

R. K. Thomas announced himself as a champion of the new citizenship and thought it would be a wise thing for the club to include the wives, sweethearts and ladies generally in their invitations to the banquet. It was so ordered.

After some discussion, December 15, or thereabouts, was fixed for the date of the annual banquet.

Judge Farley of the Committee on delegates to the Los Angeles convention reported that public sentiment is not in favor of sending delegates from their club. Further consideration of the matter was dropped.

Discussion took place on road improvement of the Campbell section. It was stated that if extensive improvements on the property adjacent to a street are any incentive to the Board of Supervisors for roadwork, Campbell avenue should receive their immediate attention. The short stretch from the bridge to the railroad was pointed to as the only good bit of roadway. So far as culverts are concerned in the business center, R. K. Thomas assured the club that Mr. Ross, the Road Commissioner from this district, would soon repair them.

By invitation, H. G. Keesling was present and addressed the club. Mr. Keesling for many years has been a most ardent advocate of the beautification of the highways. Through his efforts the Monterey road from San Jose to Gilroy, a distance of 30 miles, has been lined with California walnut trees, having raised and given the trees for that purpose. Through his suggestion the Infirmary road has recently been planted with the Franquette walnut trees for over half its length.

His remarks were warmly received by the club. He offered to the High School Board, through Mr. Thomas, enough petunia plants to make a street border around the public school grounds. A unanimous vote of thanks was tendered him, and the club warmly endorsed his work.

Mr. and Mrs. Keesling were tendered a unanimous invitation of the club to be guests at the annual banquet.—Mercury.

Dr. Ernest A. Abbott Returns to the Golden West

The friends of Ernest A. Abbott will be pleased to learn that he has returned to this section again. According to a report in the Franklin, Mass., Sentinel he left that place on the 7th of November for San Jose where he expects to establish a dental practice.

Mr. Abbott was formerly one of the Campbell "boys" and graduated from the high school here in 1906. His brother, Alden M. Abbott, is a teacher in the San Jose high school. His father, Dr. Edward C. Abbott, came here from Massachusetts and after living on a ranch on the Santa Clara-Los Gatos road a few years returned to the East.

The Sentinel says: "Since his graduation from the University of Pennsylvania dental school in 1910 Dr. Abbott has been associated with his elder brother, Edson at 30 Main street, and has gained many friends as well as many patients. Last fall he demonstrated his dental methods in clinics before the New England Dental association at Boston.

"He is a member of the house committee of the Country club, a member of Excelsior lodge, A. F., and A. M., a member of the Y. M. C. A., a member of the finance committee of the Congregational church and vice president of its Men's class, and an intelligent and progressive young man.

"He feels that the hustling West affords great opportunities for his professional work, in an ideal climate, in a state where the rapid increase of realty values affords opportunity for profitable investment. The Panama Canal and the 1915 Panama exposition in San Francisco make it advisable to gain a foothold now."

Christmas Festival Draws Crowds

Kris Kringle arrived in San Jose on Monday of this week, heralded by a brass band and followed by a thousand children in Santa Claus costumes. He immediately began to distribute bags of candy to the crowds on the street, and festival enthusiasm soon reached fever heat. Old Kris appeared on the streets again Tuesday and every day since, and intends to remain in San Jose throughout the holidays. He arrived somewhat early this year in order to be present during the Christmas Festival, which is being held from December 4 to December 16.

The citizens of the Garden City have planned an elaborate celebration as an expression of their joy at the unprecedented prosperity of the valley and the superabundance of all that goes to make life blessed and happy. The festival gathers up within itself the gratitude of the Thanksgiving season with the merry-making spirit of Christmas, uniting the two into a single spirit of festivity that has caught the entire community within its grasp.

Special features have been planned for each day. The streets have been beautifully decorated with Christmas greens and the business houses have spent thousands of dollars in perfectly original and attractive displays. The whole city has been permeated with festive joy and the streets reverbrate with the laughter and fun of the merry makers.

On December 14 there will be a grand ball at the Auditorium, and on the evening of December 16, the Christmas Festival will close with a Mardi Gras.

Early Christmas Shopping

It is all very well to talk about early Christmas shopping, but nine out of ten of us have not the early Christmas shopping wherewithal. What with shoes for Johnnie, and a coat for Susan, and gentle reminders from the coalman and other trusting ones, most of us come bump up against the week before Christmas before we can spare a cent for Christmas doings. Then the question is, What? The stores are jammed, there are heaps of foolish notions to catch the belated shopper.

And yet how easy it is to get just the right thing at a modest cost, namely, a year's subscription to The Youth's Companion!

It costs $1.75, and how can you invest $1.75 to better advantage if you wish to make a gift that will benefit as well as gratify the friend or family to whom you send it? And if you can subscribe early, you get just so much more for the money—all the issues for the remaining weeks of 1911.

Then, too, your present will be as fresh and pleasing a year from now as on Christmas morning, and of how many presents can that be said?

The one to whom you give the subscription will receive free The Companion's Calendar for 1912, lithographed in ten colors and gold, and you, too, as giver of the subscription, will receive a copy of the Calendar.

Only $1.75 now for the 52 weekly issues, but on January 1, 1912, the subscription price will be advanced to $2.00.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Get Ready

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 27, 1911.
To the Campbell Improvement Club:
Gentlemen:

The 16th semi-annual meeting of the Counties Committee of the California Development Board will be held in Los Angeles on the 12th and 13th of January, 1912. The theme of the meeting will be "GET READY" and three matters of vital importance to the State will be discussed, as follows:—

California's Preparation for the Canal.
California's Preparation for the Immigrant.
California's Preparation for the Exposition.

Hon. James N. Gillett, President of the Board, will preside, and other prominent men will take part on the program, among whom may be mentioned Mr. C. C. Moore, President of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, and a representative of the Government.

Arrangements have been completed with the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce for this meeting; also for the entertainment of delegates, which promises to be very elaborate and interesting. Full details of the program will be sent you later.

The Board is to run a special train, leaving San Francisco on the morning of the 11th and arriving in Los Angeles the same evening. A round trip rate of $14 has been secured, good for 14 days. This is a very low rate, and those who wish to go on this train should secure their tickets at an early date.

We trust your organization will realize the importance of being represented at this meeting, and that you will name five delegates from among your strongest and most influential members. Kindly advise us as soon as possible the names of your delegates so that we can communicate with them directly. Each organization should also send its secretary so that he may keep in touch with what others are doing in this line of work.

Awaiting your reply, we are,
Yours very truly,
California Development Board,
ROBERT NEWTON LYNCH,
Vice-President & Manager.

High School Notes

The boys basket ball team defeated the Los Gatos team Friday, Nov. 24, with a score of 39 to 8.

On Saturday the girls team journeyed to Centerville for a basket ball game. They were defeated with a score of 14 to 5.

Thanksgiving Day the boys were defeated in a base ball game with the Alumni. This is the first game that the boys have played outside of interclass games, and as the Alumni are old timers at the game the boys did pretty well considering all things.

A very fast game of basket ball is planned for Saturday, Dec. 9, when the boys' basket ball team from St. Mathews comes up to meet our boys. St. Mathews is reported to have a fast team and if that is so we will enjoy a fine game. The game is scheduled for 2 p. m.
